Poetry.

Ultima Veritas.

In the bitter waves of sea,
And in the tumult of life,
By the ebb and flow of fate,
From the desolate shores of doubt—
When the anchors that had cast
Are dragging in the gale,
And the only holding fast
To the things that cannot fail.
I know that right is right;
That it is not good to lie;
That love is better than spite,
And a neighbor than a spy.
I know that passion rules
The least of a sailor's mind;
I know that generous deeds
Some reward will find.
That the rulers must obey;
That the great shall succumb;
That duty lights the way
For the beautiful feet of peace;
In the darkest night of year,
When the stars are all gone out,
That faith is true and true;
And fierce though the winds may blow,
And though the angels fly,
I know that Truth and Right
Are the anchors on which we lie;
And that somewhere, beyond the stars,
Is a Love that is better than fate;
When the night unlocks her haze
I shall see Him, and I will wait.

My Mariner.

Oh, he goes away, singing,
Gaily, away to sea;
Gone, gone, gone, gone,
And he comes again, bringing
Joy and himself to me.
Down through the rosy mellow
And up the west-blowing
My mariner comes, and he
Tells me of his adventures;
The fight of his sail-cannon,
The life on a husband's fling,
Still in the house at home;
Give me a mariner, flitting
And dashing over the foam;
Give me a voice, shouting,
The fight of his sail-cannon,
The life on a husband's fling,
Still in the house at home;
Give me a mariner, flitting
And dashing over the foam;
Give me a voice, shouting,
The fight of his sail-cannon,
